WHY INDIA ?

India, the world's second-largest wheat producer after China, is likely to harvest a record 117.5 million metric tons of wheat in the crop year ending June 2025, up from 113.3 million tons produced in 2024.

Record production of wheat and rice is expected to boost the country's total foodgrains output to 354 million tons, compared to 332.3 million tons last year. The surge is driven by bumper harvests of rice, wheat, maize, pulses, and oilseeds, supported by pro-farmer policies, higher minimum support prices (MSPs), and timely input distribution.

India's Agri Sector on Track to Hit $1.4 Trillion by 2035, With 5% annual growth, India's agriculture sector—currently valued at $580–650 billion—is set to more than double by 2035. Growth is powered by digital innovation, structural reforms, and rising demand for processed and high-value agri products.
